Dear Bill:

I am greatly indebted to you for the transcript of the Gisevius testimony. I have been hoping to get this but I had no idea that it could come through so soon. I am glad that Gisevius was an effective witness. Having known him for so long and having tested him out so frequently, I had a feeling that he would be of use and that he had the courage to go through with the matter "to the bitter end" (to paraphrase the title of his book). I must admit that I had some doubts about the matter when I heard that Gisevius had been summoned by Schacht and Frick, but in view of the astute manner in which it was handled by the prosecution I see that my apprehensions were entirely unfounded.

I had a letter from Gisevius after his return to Switzerland, in which he expressed grateful appreciation for the understanding manner in which he had been dealt with, particularly by your father.

Joan seems to be having a most interesting time in Vienna and while I know she would be delighted if she could slip away for a day or two to Nurnberg, she is quite properly subject to army rules and regulations and would probably have to do that during her holiday. Undoubtedly she will get in touch with you.

With renewed thanks, I remain

Sincerely yours,
